Elliott Williams

Shareholder

Elliott Williams helps businesses turn creativity and innovation into profitable opportunities. As an intellectual property attorney, he helps companies protect their market share and safeguard innovative products and services. He handles enforcement and defense litigation involving inventions, brands, trade secrets, product designs, software, and other forms of intellectual property. His practice includes matters before federal courts and agencies, including the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office, International Trade Commission, and Customs and Border Protection, as well as enforcement through online channels. Elliott takes a practical approach to resolving disputes, often achieving favorable outcomes without litigation. He enjoys finding creative ways to leverage intellectual property to enhance revenue and limit unfair competition.

Elliott also advises clients on U.S. trade and import laws, supply chain diligence, trade remedies, and actions by U.S. trade authorities. His experience includes advising on trade remedies, import regulations, and intellectual property matters involving renewable energy projects, including investor contracts, project transfers, module supply terms, and power purchase agreements.

Elliott grew up in Alaska, near Anchorage. Before pursuing a career in law, he taught junior high and high school at a small private school in Beaverton, Oregon, while also working part-time as a freelance web programmer.
